THE BRACELET

A very pathetic drama in which a young artist is in love with an actress. He sells everything that he possesses and buys her a most expensive bracelet. He seeks work. He is badly injured and taken to a hospital and becomes totally blind. He appeals to his former sweetheart for help. She refuses. Years later while walking on the street he is run down by a motor car. The lady instructs the servants to render him every assistance. It proves to the actress who is in the motor car and in the last scene we see her devoting her life to the man to make up for the wrong she did him. It is a very interesting story.

A Comedy of rustic school days. Youth and authority never go hand in hand. There is great satisfaction in a bank account. When you know absolutely that you have money in the bank against a rainy day you don't know how good you feel, and it is surprisingly easy to accumulate once you've started. ## COUNTY JAIL CONDEMNED

State Authorities Condemn Adams County Jail. Notification not yet Received Here. Sheriff Fissel on the Subject.

The Adams County jail is condemned. This is embodied in a report to the State Board of Charities made at Harrisburg on Wednesday night by Bromley Wharton, general agent and secretary.

Sheriff Fissel when interviewed regarding the matter said: "I have not received any notification of such action. For twenty years the jail has been condemned because it was not considered a safe place in which to keep prisoners. Only a few years ago our grand jury condemned it on this account."

"All I do is to make the best of conditions as they confront me and the jail is open to inspection at any time. Only last week it was inspected by a party who has seen many jails and he declared the place in first class condition and a model as compared with some other county prisons. No state inspection has been made since I have been in office."

At the office of the County Commissioners no notification has been received. County Commissioner Cashman speaking about the matter said:

"The only thing for which the Adams County jail could be condemned is the fact that it is not safe. The prison is certainly kept in a satisfactory and sanitary condition."

Ten other county jails were condemned in the report and it has not been made public on what grounds each one was found to be faulty. In some places the facts that there are no jail yards and that the prisons are not kept clean are given as reasons for the adverse report but neither of these could be charged against this county.

The other counties in which the jails are condemned are as follows: Carbon, Columbia, Crawford, Franklin, Huntingdon, Lebanon, Susquehanna, Schuylkill, Union and Venango.

WOMAN'S QUARREL REVEALS BIG THEFT

Mrs. Stewart, Accused by Default, Ready to Tell Story.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 11.—Mrs. Jeanette Stewart, also known as Mrs. Ford, one of the women accused by Charles L. Warriner, defaulting local treasurer of the Big Four railroad, of having shared in his peculations by blackmailing him, declared she would tell the whole inside story of the $43,000 theft when the case came to court. Mrs. Stewart denied that she had ever received any money from Warriner.

The sudden breaking of her silence was caused, according to her, by a quarrel which she had with another woman, who has also been mentioned by Warriner. This quarrel resulted in the attachment of Mrs. Stewart's furniture. The officers who made the attachment were quickly followed by reporters, and in the stress of excitement Mrs. Stewart's reserve broke down.

"I have never received a cent from Charles Warriner," she said, "and I never gave any information to the railroad about his shortage. It was another woman that did it all; a woman I thought was my friend. I know the whole story and I will tell it in court, too."

"This woman," said Mrs. Stewart, "I took into my flat and she occupied it while I was out of town. I thought she was my friend. She went to a department store and guaranteed my account there. Now we have quarreled and she has gone up there and withdrawn her guarantee, resulting in this suit against me."

The jugular vein had been severed and a piece of metal was imbedded in his neck. The dog ran back and forth between the road and his dead master until he met Cephas Kiger, who lives nearby. Kiger's curiosity being aroused by the dog's frantic actions, he followed and was led to the scene of the tragedy.

With every year that goes by that easy way of harvesting corn, hogging it down, makes new friends, and this because it saves the job of husking and because hogs fed corn in this fashion do better and make more rapid gains than in the usual method of pen or lot feeding. Not only do the hogs get the corn, but at the same time a good deal of green forage, which keeps their systems in good condition, enabling them to consume a generous ration of corn with the largest possible advantage. This method requires good fencing, but the gain in one season will usually pay for this.

MISSING BANKER FOUND DEAD

Stricken With Heart Disease in New York Hotel.

HIS COMPANION DISAPPEARS

After Leaving Wife, Edwin Hills Registered at Gilsey House With a Blonde and Was Found Dead in Bed—Fortune in Jewels on Body.

New York, Nov. 11.—Edwin Hills, a banker and manufacturer of Plainville, Conn., who disappeared Tuesday afternoon, and for whom the police had sent out a general alarm, was found dead in a room at the Gilsey house. He had gone to the hotel and registered with a woman as Mr. and Mrs. Charles French, of Hartford, Conn. Coroner Shady said that death was undoubtedly due to natural causes, probably heart disease.

Mr. Hills came to New York Tuesday afternoon, accompanied by his wife. They went to the Imperial hotel, where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. J. Hart Welch, of Douglaston, L. I. Mr. Welch is Mr. Hills' brother-in-law.

Soon after arriving Mr. Hills said that he had to go to see a Mr. Fitzpatrick. When her husband did not return Tuesday evening Mrs. Hills became alarmed and consulted Mr. Welch. The police were then notified.

Early Tuesday evening the missing man entered the Gilsey house, where he was not known. With him was a woman. They registered as Mr. and Mrs. Charles French, Hartford, Conn. The clerk did not notice the pair particularly. He said the woman was a blonde and apparently about thirty or thirty-five years old. He thought he recognized her as some one who was in the habit of coming to the hotel.

They were assigned to a room and went upstairs. Some time next morning the woman came down and left the key at the desk. Later the chambermaid went in to make up the bed. There was no key in the door and she opened it with her latch key. She saw that there was some one in the bed and did not go in. During the afternoon the manager told the chambermaid to go and wake up the man so she could do her work. She discovered then that he was dead.

From papers and letters in the dead man's pockets it was at once suspected that he was Mr. Hills. His brother-in-law was notified and identified the body.

Coroner Shady was notified. He said that the man had died a natural death. In the room were found all the valuables which Mr. Hills had with him when he left the Imperial and $50 out of the $100 that he carried. There was a diamond ring valued at $500, a pearl pin worth $500, another worth about $400, a Swiss watch that cost $350, and a locket set with diamonds, which was valued at $450.

LADY COOK SAILS FOR HOME

Says Only Real "Home Women" Are Ones Who Want to Vote.

New York, Nov. 11.—Lady Cook (formerly Tennessee Claflin), a leader in the international movement for equal suffrage, after a short visit to this country, sailed for England on the Adriatic.

Upon her arrival in this country, Lady Cook announced that she had $1,000,000 to spend in promoting the movement.

"My offer still holds good," she said. "When we get the right of franchise we want only the intelligent women to vote. The cause will have no use for women who devote their time to primping their hair, being measured for gowns and paying practically no attention to their home. These women are after their husbands' pocketbooks. They would not know how to exercise the right of the ballot. The women who want to vote are the home women, the mothers, women who are constantly seeking the further advancement of those dearest to them."

WHY SO WEAK?

Kidney Troubles May be Sapping Your Life Away. Gettysburg People Have Learned This Fact.

When a healthy man or woman begins to run down without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well. Here is Gettysburg testimony to prove it.

Mrs. John T. Oldier, 116 W. Middle St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I was troubled with weak and disordered kidneys for over a year. My back ached constantly and at times pains extended into my head. I suffered from chills, was often very dizzy and was annoyed by the frequent passages of the kidney secretions. When Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I procured a box at the People's drug store and began using them according to directions. They helped me from the first and in a short time I was without a symptom of kidney trouble. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to other persons suffering from this complaint."

BIG STEALINGS OF SUGAR TRUST

Customs Frauds in Twenty Years Amount to $30,000,000.

PROTECTED BY POLITICIANS

George H. Earle, Jr., of Philadelphia, Was Rebuffed When He Offered to Lay Bare the Frauds Against the United States.

New York, Nov. 11.—The sugar trust has stolen boldly and enormously from the United States treasury for at least twenty years. It stole with the assistance of officials employed by the United States. It was nursed and protected in its stealing by powerful politicians.

The direct evidence of the sugar trust's crime has lain in the New York custom house since the stealing began. Practically every payment of duty on sugar made by the trust bears on its face the proof of robbery—the true weight and the false. Those who knew that the sugar trust was a thief, and who sought for legal proof in the custom house records, were referred to the thief itself.

George H. Earle, Jr., of Philadelphia, offered to lay bare the sugar trust's full iniquity to President Roosevelt and Attorney General Bonaparte. Mr. Earle was rebuffed and left in complete discouragement. For one year after that the sugar trust continued to steal.

The facts show that the sugar trust could not have stolen upwards of $30,000,000 without the cognizance of treasury officials and the patronage of politicians. The same cargoes were weighed and underweighed. The trust paid freight on the actual weight. It paid duties on the underweight. It stole from 5 to 10 per cent of the duty on every cargo.

The trust tried to blackmail the carriers of cargoes by pretended evaporation of sugar. It weakened when the carriers threatened to tell the truth. It succeeded in part of its blackmail because the carriers feared they would be driven out of business.

The trust's power was such that it secured a special rate of estimating duties. This enabled it to juggle figures in the New York custom house so that it apparently got small refunds, while in reality it got large repayments.

Shippers of sugar the world over knew of this robbery. Carriers knew it. Weighers knew it. Officials within the custom house itself must have known it. The sugar trust silenced revelations.

The ginseng plant is an interesting one apart from the high value which is placed on the medicinal properties of its roots by the Chinese, who buy most of that produced in this country. The natural home of the herb is the moist, shady wood lot, where no direct rays of the sun strike the carpet of decaying leaves and where domestic animals do not browse or tramp. The plant is a perennial in habit, the stalk, which is from eight to fourteen inches high, dying down in the fall. This bears three divided leaves, which have a close resemblance

BODIES TAKEN FROM MINE

Only One Man Entombed in Burning Colliery Escaped Alive.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 11.—When the fire in the Auchingloss mine of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad company was finally extinguished, after raging for thirty hours, the bodies of nine victims had been brought to the surface.

Only one of the men behind the fire escaped alive. He is Charles Adus, who dashed through the flames when the alarm was given. Although severely burned he will recover. The other eight also got warning, but several of them delayed to pick up their tools and clothes, and then it was too late. Many yards of flame had swept the workings and shut off their only outlet to the bottom of the shaft. John Dixon tried to run through it, but was overcome and burned to death. The others retreated to the most remote point they could reach, seeking air, and were then overcome and suffocated by the gases from the fire.

The officials say that the explosion was caused by a feeder of gas being ignited and causing an explosion.

JERSEY GIRL JAILED FOR SUFFRAGE FIGHT

Miss Alice Paul Gets Month Imprisonment in London.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—Miss Alice Paul, of Moorestown, N. J., a graduate of Swarthmore college in the class of 1905, has been sentenced to a month at hard labor in a London prison for smashing windows in a suffragette disturbance at the lord mayor's banquet, according to dispatches received from London.

It was stated at the trial that Miss Paul, with another young woman, entered the Guild hall, where the feast to celebrate the king's birthday anniversary was held, disguised as charwomen, and waited all day for the opportunity to make a demonstration during the dinner in the evening.

The demonstration occurred just as the lord mayor was toasting the king. Notwithstanding the arrangements, which the police thought made intrusion impossible, just as the lord mayor had raised his cup there was a crash, followed by a shower of glass that fell upon a statue of Wellington, and a faraway shout like a wandering echo of "Votes for women."

When the news of Miss Paul's arrest and conviction was told to Mrs. William M. Paul, her mother, who resides on the Paul estate, "Faulside," about a mile from Moorestown, she became greatly agitated.

THE PRESIDENT HOME

Hurries From Welcome at Station to the White House.

Washington, Nov. 11.—After an absence of more than three months, during which he has made a 13,000 mile trip through the west and south, President Taft slept in the White House.

He left the capital Aug. 6 last, with the cheers of the crowds ringing in his ears. He returned to the tune of the same cheers, but he carried only a moment with the various welcoming parties.

His objective point was home, and as quickly as he could get away from the brief speeches of welcome he climbed into his big automobile. The chauffeur broke all the speed records of the district on the last leg of the president's record-breaking journey. There was no demonstration at the White House.

blance to those of the hickory seedling. The plant bears a cluster of small bluish flowers, which produce bright red two-seeded berries in the fall about the size of peas. Roots which have a commercial value are produced on plants two years old and more. The dried roots are said to sell from $3 to $7 a pound and the berries from 30 to 60 cents per dozen. If reports are to be credited, good money is made raising ginseng commercially under artificial shade, but it is the few who succeed rather than the many.

GRANGE RAPS CENTRAL BANK

National Body Goes on Record Against Plan.

SCORES SHIP SUBSIDY PLAN

Stand Against Aldrich's Bank Scheme Is Unanimous—Strong Legislative Platform Adopted—Creasy's First Report Read.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 11.—The National Grange, representing a million farmers, went on record as opposed to the Aldrich central bank scheme. The western representatives at the grange meeting were particularly vigorous in their denunciation of Aldrich and his plan.

In his annual address at the opening of the forty-third session of the National Grange, National Master Bachelier denounced the Aldrich proposition.

"The question of amending our national banking laws so as to provide a currency system that will provide more elastic in times of financial stringency, will come up in congress in the near future," said he. "Among other plans suggested as remedies for the present admittedly unsatisfactory conditions, is that of the creation of a great central bank, which will be urged by the financial and speculative interests located in New York city and known commonly as 'Wall street.'"

"So far as this plan has been outlined by its advocates, its inevitable tendency would be to create a gigantic banking monopoly and to place the thousands of small country banks at the mercy of the great financial interests. As the grange has always denounced monopolies in any form, it is advisable that appropriate action be taken to express our opposition to any changes in our currency or banking laws that would give one bank or combination of banks advantage over all the others of the country."

These recommendations were embodied in a resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

National Master Bachelier also rapped President Taft on the latter's ship subsidy stand.

Legislative Platform.

The grange endorsed the movement to elect senators by direct vote and provides for aggressive work by the National Grange legislative committee toward securing a constitutional convention, which is made possible by the action upon this proposition by a sufficient number of state legislatures.

The legislative platform of the National Grange is outlined as follows:

"Federal appropriation for highway improvement.

"Establishment of rural and general parcels post.

"Establishment of postal savings banks.

"Election of United States senators by direct vote.

"Appointment of a permanent non-partisan tariff commission.

"Defeat of ship subsidy legislation.

"Retaining or strengthening the present oleomargarine laws.

"Liberal appropriation for farm schools."

In his first report to the National Grange as representative from Pennsylvania, William T. Creasy made some progressive recommendations to the national body and sounded a number of points in which farmers are deeply interested. His report was referred to the committee on masters' addresses.

Head Waiter at Popular New York Restaurant Worth a Fortune.

New York, Nov. 11.—Tips and his savings were so wisely invested by James Thielman, head waiter at Delmonico's, that when he died recently he left an estate valued at half a million dollars. This amount of the estate became known when his wife applied for letters of administration of the estate.

Prior to becoming the head waiter Thielman from 1872 had worked as an ordinary waiter in Delmonico's.

Murderers Lured Victim to Death.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Stefano Lezze, a Sicilian, was found murdered in the highway, to which place he was lured by two strangers. There was a bullet hole in the left side of his neck. His pipe was clutched in his left hand and there was an empty beer bottle by his side, indicating that his murderers offered him the beer to drink and shot him while he drank.

Insane Woman Hangs Herself.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Mrs. Susan C. P. Cooper, a wealthy patient of Bloomingdale asylum here, committed suicide by hanging herself in the bathroom. Mrs. Cooper had been ill and was in care of a nurse. While the nurse was away, Mrs. Cooper went in the bathroom, where she tied two towels together and hanged herself from an electric light bracket.

Breaks Half Dollar With His Teeth.

Seranton, Pa., Nov. 11.—Michael Beresh, of Jessup, took a half dollar from the bar in a saloon and placed it between his teeth. There was a snap, a tinkle, and Beresh spat two pieces of metal into his hand. "Here's your change," he said to the proprietor.

Took It to Himself.

A well known hotel keeper and politician received an appointment as collector of internal revenue. Arriving at his office one morning, he found on his desk a letter addressed to him official and without any postmark. Upon opening the letter he was surprised to find a $500 bill, to which was pinned a piece of paper with these words: "Conscience money." Folding up the greenback and tucking it carefully in his vest pocket, he remarked, "I always did suspect that bartender of mine."

LATE OR EARLY HATCH—WHICH?

We quit late chicks long ago, for the few that survive, if they don't get rump and cause an epidemic, do not lay until the cheap egg season and make immature breeders.

Our pictures show the great difference between April and August chicks of same age.

On Sept. 15 the April birds weighed six and one-half pounds and the August only one and one-quarter pounds and were just facing their first frosts.

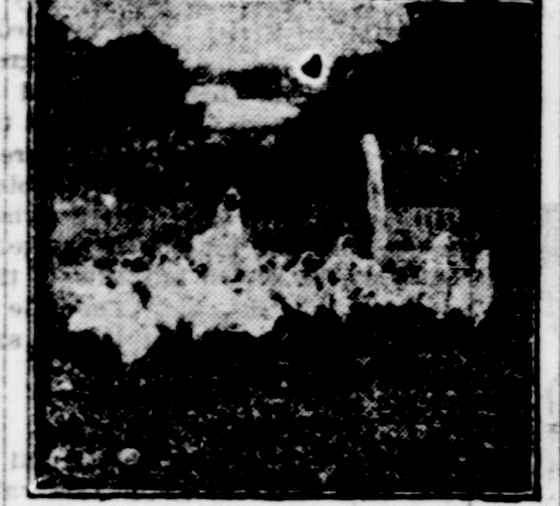

APRIL CHICKS—NOTE SIZE AND VIGOR.

March, April and May are the ideal breeding months. Then breeders renew their youth in the balmy spring air, feed on fresh verdure, catch the early worm and are at their best in health and egg production, and their reproductive powers, dormant all winter, are active.

Eggs thus highly fertilized hatch many vigorous chicks; hens sit well and have every natural advantage for rearing their broods to strong early maturity. Then comes the heat.

Breeders after three months' breeding and laying are worn down, heat overcomes; thus come poorly fertilized eggs and weak chicks. Incubator heat is hard to control; brooders and hens are worse.

Tender vegetation and juicy bugs and worms, on which early chicks wax fat, are mostly dried up. Mild weather, in which the first chicks sported on cool, dewy grass and scratched in moist soil, is succeeded by the austere season and parched, hot ground. This is not overdrawn. Witness the awful drought of the past two seasons.

AUGUST CHICKS—NOTE SMALL SIZE.

In the eastern states. Even the bats fell from their hiding places, and large napes died on the streets.

Such dry weather is not just right for young turkeys and chicks, as some suppose, as it destroys their natural food, stunts their growth and brings disease. Summer is the best breeder, head lice especially, the curse of young chicks, breeding very rapidly. The early chicks are not bothered much with vermin and pull through the tender period without much trouble from these bloodsuckers.

Hens should not be set in hot weather. The inactivity of hatching and self denial of brooding, with lice and heat, weaken them for that trying ordeal, the molt. We seldom hatch after the first week in June, for the extra feed and care, plus the loss, make it a nonpaying proposition.

DON'TS.

Don't jerk or shirk, but work. The steady have money ready; the rash are short of cash.

Don't sell preserved eggs for fresh stock on Saturday and occupy the chief seat in the synagogue on Sunday.

Don't let greed rule you to corner the feed and skin those in need and then occupy the amen corner and pray "Amen." A hearty amen does not always denote an honest man.

Don't let any one argue you into believing that poultry can eat anything, and try to save money feeding mussy feed. If you do such a thing "the fools aren't all dead yet," but a fool's chickens may be.

Don't put off till tomorrow what you put off yesterday to do today.

Judged by the Odds.

Once when Lionel Brough gave his humorous entertainment at a northern lunatic asylum he spent the hour he had to wait for his train in playing one of the inmates, a harmless old gentleman, a game of billiards. Mr. Brough offered the patient 40 in 100 and was beaten easily. "If you go about giving odds like that," said the patient, "they'll put you in here with me."

BULLS OF QUALITY.

It Is Money Well Spent In Buying a Good Sire.

A good many men tell themselves every year that the next bull they buy will be a much better one than they ever bought before. This is indeed a good resolve, and it is one of the first signs of progress. But so often these resolves are left at home or lose their influence when it comes to the act of buying, and the temptation to save a few dollars by buying a cheap bull is yielded to, in which case hope for any material improvement in the succeeding crop of calves must be left behind. The influence of a good sire, we feel, will bear repeating often, and we beg to quote from "The Business of Dairying," as follows:

Let us follow up this matter and see what a good sire is really worth to a dairyman. With the first progeny the male has furnished half the qualities, provided the parents are equally prepotent. But the cow has but one calf a year, while the bull may have sired all the calves in the herd. If it is of ordinary size and if he is a strong individual of good type the chances are that he will be more prepotent than the cows, particularly if it is a grade herd. His influence then will be as much and possibly more than all the cows in the herd taken together. With each generation of calves the improvement increases, and the good qualities become more finely fixed, while the defects from the dam decrease, and in time the bull may become practically the whole herd.

If he has been well bred and his influence has been good it is possible for the sire to be the means of more than doubling the production and hence the profits of the herd. Looking at this from a business standpoint, then, the evidence is clear that the most careful attention should be given to the selection of the sire. His ancestry is of even more importance than that of the cow, and care should be taken that he comes from a good milking strain. He should be pure bred in order that his characteristics may be well fixed and consequently have more influence than a grade dam. He should show vigor and good individual type. Such a sire need not cost more than one-tenth of the grade herd which he heads, yet he may have the most influence in the improvement of the herd.

Indeed, the pure bred sire of good individual merit costs more than a grade and for reasons that should be evident to every thinking person. As a general proposition it costs from two to three times as much to grow a bull as it does to grow a steer. In short, it takes more feed and better care.

Needless to say, a good sire is a pure bred sire. A sire of any other description should never be used if it is the hope to make any progress in improving the herd. A good many men have been led to believe that a grade sire is as good as a pure bred sire. It may be possible to point out instances here and there where a grade sire has impressed his get with his own qualities, but this is the exception, not the rule. The rule holds good so often that it is not safe to break it.

When Buying the Bull.

When buying your herd bull don't pay any attention to the real value of his calves. Veal is a minor consideration on the dairy farm.

STOCK VAGARIES

Try an open bridge on the skittish horse. It is quite likely the things he cannot see with a blind bridge on that cause him to shy and keep on the look-out for something to scare at.

Care With Angora Bucks.

Care should be taken in feeding the bucks. Don't overfeed them, says Wool Markets and Sheep. One pint of corn or wheat at a feeding is sufficient, with plenty of hay and roughage. If overfed they are liable to become foundered.

Fattening Hogs.

It is a good rule in fattening hogs never to feed quite as much as they want or not enough so they will waste any. They will take the next feed better and do better. At the same time be sure to keep pens and sleeping quarters well cleaned out.

Feed For Colts.

The colt should have a variety of feeds, so that it may build up the various tissues of its body. Clover hay and wheat bran contain necessary mineral matter for the building of bone. Flaxseed meal in small quantities is good for keeping the colt's bowels in good condition and for making the coat sleek.

The Brown Swiss Cow.

Statistics show that a well kept Brown Swiss cow fed on cut grass or hay, with plenty of pure fresh water, will yield as much as ten quarts of milk daily throughout the year. It is also said that the globules of butter fat of this breed are usually larger than those of the other European breeds of cattle.

THE WAITER WHO SERVED WITHOUT PAY

By MINNIE B. CARTER.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

A man calling himself Giovanni walked into an Italian restaurant in New York and, addressing the proprietor, Antonio Mancini, asked for employment as a waiter. Being told that the force of waiters was complete, he said that he would work for nothing until a vacancy occurred.

Soon after Giovanni's employment the custom of the establishment dropped off, and the proprietor, instead of filling waiters' vacancies, began to discharge those he had. He told Giovanni that there was no hope for him to secure pay and he was welcome to leave as soon as he liked. To this Giovanni replied that he was making a living from the time he received and this was far better than nothing.

But the attendance at the restaurant continued to decrease. Mancini, who was an excellent cook, went himself into the kitchen and even invented new dishes with the most delectable flavorings, hoping to regain the clientele he had lost. But it was of no avail. His old customers did not come back to him, and new ones were not to be attracted. He was paying a high rental, and his expenses in other respects were enormous. One day he called his few remaining employees to his office and said to them:

"I am expecting the sheriff to levy on what remains here. Until recently I was making money. Indeed, I possessed $20,000. I was about to sell out my business and return to our beloved Italy to spend a comfortable old age. Instead of that I am a beggar in a foreign land. Go and secure new places. As for me, I know not what to do."

All expressed sorrow for their employer and went away, except Giovanni. He stood alone with Mancini after the others had departed.

"Why do you remain?" asked the restaurateur.

"To tell you the cause of your misfortune."

There was something in the man's eye and the tone in which the words were spoken that arrested his employer's earnest attention. He looked at Giovanni for an explanation.

"You wonder, signor," said the latter, "why I, to whom you have never paid a cent, have stood by you to the last."

"I do."

"I am not only a countryman of yours, but I came from the same district as you, the lake region of Italy."

"Oh!"

"I was a smuggler engaged in running dutiable goods across Lake Como to a region where it was easy to dispose of them. You know that the lake is patrolled by the customs officers and there is great risk in carrying goods across. Indeed, it is practically impossible to do so without detection. Well, I divided my profits with them, and they took care not to see me. In this way I gained enough to pay for a farm and was about to purchase one, marry the girl I loved and turn farmer when a misfortune occurred to me. A customs officer I had been bribing made it his business to see me while smuggling. I was arrested and imprisoned."

Mancini sat spellbound by the story, every moment growing paler. Giovanni kept his eye fixed on him intently.

"While in jail," he resumed, "I was put into a cell with an old smuggler. He was ill, and I nursed him. Dying, he made me his heir. Where do you suppose his fortune was deposited?"

"Go on."

"You remember the point formed by the junction of Lakes Como and Lecchi?"

"I was born on it."

"There, across the lake, one can see Monte Croci and on a crag near by the little church of San Martino."

"I was married there," groaned Mancini.

"And not far from San Martino is a hole in the rock. From across the lake it looks only large enough to contain a big bowlder. It would hold a church."

"I have been in it."

"The fortune I inherited was there. The smuggler had turned all his profits into diamonds and hidden them in the cave. I brought them to America in the shape of bills of exchange."

"And have lost your inheritance?"

"No; I have every cent of it. And why have I, a rich man, been working here without pay? To ruin the customs officer who betrayed me and who married my betrothed. I have caused the falling off of your business by circulating false stories of what food you have served to your guests."

"You—you have done this?"

"I have."

"You have taken a terrible revenge. But you are rich, and I will have damages under the law."

"On what evidence?"

Mancini was silent.

"Besides, where is my fortune? No one knows. We Italians, especially we who have been smugglers and revenue officers, know how to cover our tracks."

A groan was the only response.

"But it is not necessary that you should prosecute me. For the sake of the girl of whom you deprived me I shall repair the damage I have done. Here is a check for $10,000. Begin again. There will be no more stories to hinder you. In a few months you will have regained your former position."

PIGS' FEET.

A Poor Foot Regarded by an Expert as a Fatal Weakness.

One of the best known experts on hogs in this country has this to say about the importance that good feet play in the standard of perfection in those animals:

I have never yet seen a good hog on poor feet, for the simple reason that we look at the feet first, and unless they indicate that they are carrying satisfactorily the hog that is over them we waste no time commenting favorably or unfavorably on the merits of that individual.

I regard a poor foot as a fatal weakness, and for some reason or other it is one that is more apt to be transmitted than any other weakness commonly found in hogs. Possibly this is due to the fact that throughout the corn belt foodstuffs do not properly build the bone, thus predisposing the animal to a weakness in his lower extremity. The old saying, "No foot, no horse," might equally apply to the hog.

In these days, when we are trying to get them up to 300 pounds at eight or nine months, unless they have underpinning of the right form and character our object will soon be defeated. Hogs "down in the heel" soon get sore under weight. In the case of sows it means lack of exercise, which in turn spells disaster at farrowing time.

As our shows are primarily educational institutions, I hope that our swine judges will emphasize this matter of feet just a little more. I realize that many a good hog is so overloaded in being fitted for the show that he springs his pasterns, while under a lighter load he might show the best of foot form. In such a case I do not believe the judge should be held responsible for turning down altogether the animal so loaded. I am inclined to think that a good foot and leg indicate constitutional qualities. If you have it combined with heart girth you have in animals of all breeds a clearly defined tendency to make good use of the food consumed.

While we do not breed our hogs for action, as we do in the case of horses, yet as they are always urged to heavy weights at an early age a good foot and the right kind of pastern joint are just as important in the case of the hog as in the horse.

THE HORSEMAN

When two horses become accustomed to working together, don't change them.

In matching up the work teams mate them in size, weight and disposition as nearly as possible.

It is very hard on a prompt horse to be obliged to work with a lazy one.

The wear and tear is great and unnecessary and a loss.

A Blenheim Is Costly.

Soundness is an essential feature in the makeup of a driving or riding horse when placed upon the market. A small blenheim will not only lower the value of a horse, but will often prevent the sale entirely.

Various Horseshoes.

In Iceland horses are shod with sheep's horn, while in the Sudan they are shod with camel's skin. A German not long ago invented a horseshoe of paper, prepared by saturating with oil, turpentine and other ingredients. Thin layers of such paper are glued to the hoof till requisite thickness is attained. The shoes thus made are said to be durable and impenetrable by moisture.

Thoroughbred Horse.

An authority expresses himself as follows: As an old horseman who has bred and handled horses of many types I have frequently been surprised at the answers given by the majority of people when asked the question, "What constitutes the most striking difference between the thoroughbred and the common horse?"

Nineteen out of twenty will name the beauty or the speed of the thoroughbred. But, important as are both of these qualities, neither is correct. It is simply that the thoroughbred when he is tired will keep on with an undiminished courage and ambition, while a common horse under the same circumstances will quit.

Ground Feed For Horses.

Old horses or others with poor teeth should always have ground grain. It is almost impossible for them to make use of the whole grain. During the spring months or at any season of the year when they are shedding teeth colts should have ground grain in order to prevent any unnecessary use of the jaws during such a period.

It is argued by some that the cost of grinding will not make it profitable to grind feed for horses not at work unless they have defective teeth. But where one is prepared to grind his own grain himself the work can be done at odd times, and the expense of grinding need hardly enter into the question.

The Cubby Hole.

Simeon Easygo, after living all of his sixty years on a farm, decided to take an ocean voyage. On board ship everything was very strange to him, and he found his little stateroom somewhat cramped. He objected the lack of space, however, by stowing his trousers and shoes into a round cupboard in the side of the vessel when he was preparing to go to bed. In the morning when he started to dress there were startling disclosures. Hastily summoning the steward, he exclaimed, "Steward, las' night I put my clothes in that 'ar cubby hole, an' they hain't thar now, an' I want 'em."

"That ain't a clothespress," said the sympathetic steward consolingly; "that's a porthole, sir."
